COME ACROSS

By F. S. Sullivan

If you're feelin' sort o' sneak in, know you haven't acted right and done your level best to help the boys to win the fight, if you feel your neighbors callin' you a lacker or a Hun, just loosen up your purse string and jar loose from some mon. O, it takes a lot o' money for to carry on the war and to furnish full equipment for the boys that's "over there", and unless you do the proper thing and help put up the kale there'll be a lot o' battle ships that will never spread a sail. No, you cannot go and help them, you are too old and fat; your feet are maybe gun-shy, and there's other reasons that keep you from the trenches; of bloodshed you're not fond, but you can help them just the same by buying of a bond. So, if you're feeling pes-jimistic and not a bit serene, if from long Hooverizing your appetite is keen, if you, for any reason can't go across the pond, why come across, you tight-wad, and buy another bond. And when the war is over and the boys come marching home your heart will swell with triumph at the good that you have done. And when your life is ended and you have passed beyond, up THERE you will get credit for each and every bond.

Notice To Parent

A number of children have the habit of jumping on my truck while same is in motion. There is considerable danger in such practice, and therefore this will be taken by all parents as sufficient notice that I will not be responsible for accidents growing out of such practice.

A. O. Rosenberry.
